Course Purpose

What matters is an affirmation of a social world accepting of tension and conflict. What matters is an affirmation of energy and the passion of reflection in a renewed hope of common action, of face-to-face encounters among friends and strangers, striving for meaning, striving to understand. What matters is a quest for new ways of living together, of generating more and more incisive and inclusive dialogues.

--Maxine Greene

[T]rustworthiness is likely to be increased when inquiry is motivated by emancipatory aims and utilizes methods that are just.

--Allison Jaggar

To explore how "epistemic truth and social justice often promote each other" (Jaggar, 2008, p. x) in qualitative inquiry, this course will examine how qualitative researchers have used Critical (with an intentional capital “C”), critical race, feminist, queer, indigenous, postcolonial, and dis/ability perspectives to inform their research methodologies. It will also examine some participatory action and arts-based research approaches. More specifically, this class will ask students to critically examine how the research we do both advances and undermines struggles for social justice and to consider the dilemmas involved in approaching qualitative inquiry from critical perspectives within academe.

Readings:

For some class meetings, you will be required to read all the readings listed. On other occasions, specific assignments will be made to groups of students and/or you will assign readings to your peers. We will use the following texts in our course:

- Four of the following texts that we will select collectively on the first day of class and on which small groups will present:

- Additional readings are located on ELMS (go to 788G page → then Course Tools → then Course Reserves) on the Internet and are marked by an asterisk (*) below.

Class Participation:
You will be expected to attend all scheduled classes and participate actively in discussions. You are expected to be a collaborative participant of all the work in class. Our discussions serve as a place for you to sharpen your thinking, challenge your assumptions, exchange insights and perceptions, and contribute towards others’ ideas. You will be assigned a participation grade for this strand of the course. You cannot participate and engage in ideas in the class if you do not attend them.

Assignments:

A brief outline of each assignment is provided below as well as the due dates. We will discuss the details of these assignments more fully in class.

Seminar Presentations/Discussions (see the course calendar for dates)
In groups of five you will be required to craft a presentation/discussion around one of four books that we will use in our class (to be determined the first day of class). Because these presentations will occur later in the semester, you will be expected to draw from the theoretical and methodological discussions we have held previously. More specifically, you will be expected to (1) present the main arguments of the study as well as to (2) discuss its methodological features, and (3) compare and contrast the text to other readings in the course. You can ask members of the class to read the text in its entirety or only selected chapters/sections as preparation for the class presentation/discussion. Please submit a lesson outline/plan to me one week before your presentation.

Midterm Paper (choose one of the following options, due March 15):
- Pretend you are at a dinner party or other social event with two or more of the authors from the first half of the course. Write a dialogue of your conversation that critically analyzes the authors’ perspectives and methodological stances in relation to your own. [~8 pages]
- Write a critical analysis of two of the course readings [~4 pages each].
- Write a 2011 ASHE or other conference proposal on a critical approach to qualitative inquiry. [<2500 words]
- An individual option, with clear connections to the course, that is discussed and negotiated with me.
Final Project (choose one of the following options, due May 10-15):

- Work through a theoretical justification of methodology for your research question. Working from the readings and discussions in the course (and texts beyond the course, if appropriate), articulate a rationale for one or more qualitative methods and explore how you might employ them. This should be more than a technical blueprint for your work so please highlight methodological issues of why to use certain tools and their implications for your work. [20-25 pp.]
- A “publishable” paper in the form of an empirical (pilot) study or a synthetic literature review on a critical approach to qualitative inquiry. [20-25 pp.]
- An individual option, with clear connections to the course, that is discussed and negotiated with me.

Grading:

My philosophy of grading is that numeric assessments help record your accomplishments. I do not use grades to rank or sort students. Therefore, I will try to set clear standards for you to meet and help you reach those standards by commenting on your work. Both the content and quality of your writing are important. I suggest reading aloud every assignment before handing it in and making sure that all your work is proofread carefully. I take your usage of grammar and spelling into consideration when evaluating your work. Each assignment will be weighted according to the following breakdown:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Assignment</th>
<th>Weight</th>
<th>Grading Scale</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Participation</td>
<td>15%</td>
<td>Grading scale (+/- might be used)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Book Presentation</td>
<td>20%</td>
<td>90-100 = A</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Midterm</td>
<td>25%</td>
<td>80-89 = B (I expect nothing less)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Final Project</td>
<td>40%</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Total</td>
<td>100%</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Note: For the course, if you require any special accommodations due to a documented disability, please let me know.

Calendar

(subject to changes as necessary)

January 25: Introductions, Syllabus, Logistics, Readings, etc………

February 1: Intellectual moorings in critical approaches to qualitative research

Have Read—

Recommended—

* North, C. E. (2008). What is all this talk about “social justice”? Mapping the terrain of education’s latest catchphrase. Teachers College Record, 110(6), 1182-1206.

February 8: Studying Up

Have Read—

* Zweigenhaft, R. L., & Domhoff, G. W. (2006). Chapter 1 (pp. 1-12) and either Chapter 4 (pp. 91-142), Chapter 5 (pp. 143-172), or Chapter 6 (pp. 173-202). Diversity in the power elite: How it happened, why it matters. New York: Rowman & Littlefield Publishers, Inc.

Recommended—

February 15: Critical Race Studies

Have Read—

Recommended—
February 22: Indigenous/TribalCrit/Postcolonial Studies
   Have Read—

Recommended—

March 1: Exploring qualitative text
   Have Read Student-Selected Text(s)

March 8: Feminist Studies
   Have Read—

Recommended—
March 15: Participatory Action Research

AND READ 3 OF THE FOLLOWING ARTICLES FROM URBAN REVIEW, 41(1):

* Guishard, M. (2009). The false paths, the endless labors, the turns now this way and now that: PAR, mutual vulnerability, and the politics of inquiry.

* Stoudt, B. G. (2009). The role of language and discourse in the investigation of privilege: Using PAR to discuss theory, develop methodology, & interrupt power.

Recommended—

---

Midterm Assignment Due

March 22: Spring Break—NO CLASS

March 29: Exploring qualitative text

Have Read Student-Selected Text(s)

April 5: Queer Studies

Have Read—

Recommended—

April 12: TBD (last day of AERA)

April 19: Exploring qualitative text
Have Read Student-Selected Text(s)

April 26: (Dis)ability Studies
Have Read—

Recommended—

May 3: Exploring qualitative text
Have read student-selected text

May 10: Creative/Arts-Based Approaches & End-of-Semester Reflections
Have Read—

Final Assignment Due (can turn in as late as May 15)